Colin Potter

Access to Social Science

Colin has overcome adversity, achieving abstinence after 35 years of addiction. He currently works with local young people with mental health issues through mindfulness sessions and hopes to go to university to study psychology and use his learning to continue to help others.

"It has been tough, but through the support of my lecturers and College staff I have completed my course and am using what I have learnt to help in the wider community. I hope to continue working with young people and broaden my knowledge so I can reach out to others who are struggling."

University Short Courses & CPD Awards

We are extremely proud to have been awarded the Teaching Excellence Framework Gold award for our high standard of teaching.

Our flexible Short Course and Certificate of Professional Development (CPD) awards can be studied in a variety of subjects at higher education level.

In partnership with the University of Plymouth, we can offer university-level modules from any of our Foundation Degrees.

These courses allow you to build higher-level skills and support career development, as well as supporting progression on to further university-level qualifications. They are an excellent way of trying an area of study before committing to a full qualification.

Short Courses - all short courses are either ten or 20 credit modules (you can study up to 40 credits) which will be awarded by the University of Plymouth.

CPD Awards - these awards consist of 60 credits and can be studied using modules across the range of our Foundation Degrees, although we would usually recommend that these are in related subjects. Professionally focused, these awards are designed to support business and employer needs. On completion you will be awarded a Certificate of Professional Development by the University of Plymouth.

Although you can't build a full degree out of these qualifications, you can use them towards an appropriate Higher National Certificate or Foundation Degree, with a maximum of 120 credits allowed.
